Where knowledge meets experience

Geneva, November 2015

The Geneva Centre for Security Policy (GCSP), with the support of the Swiss Government, has the honour to invite Thailand to nominate candidates for:

The 17th Edition of the NISC:
"Mapping the Contemporary Security Environment to Meet Future Challenges"
Monday 25 April to Friday 17 June 2016, Geneva

Countries may nominate diplomats, military officers, or civil servants from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Defence, Development, Economy, Finance, Interior, Justice, Prime Minister's office, Presidential Administration or other relevant ministries.

For the past sixteen years, the NISC has deepened the participants' understanding of the complexity of contemporary security threats in order to prepare and empower them to have greater strategic impact in building a better security environment for the future.

The aim of the course is to prepare participants for decision-making, policy planning and implementation in a range of complex and interlinked peace and security situations, including post-conflict recovery. The objectives of the course are to enhance the participants':

- Understanding of the complex and emerging peace and security challenges in a globalising world
- Ability to respond effectively to various security and cross-cutting crisis situations
- to enhance the participants' relevant skills set to be effective security policy practitioners
- to promote mutual understanding and generate a community of security policy professionals

With the support of the Swiss Government, we are pleased to offer this course free of tuition charges.

The GCSP strives to meet gender parity in course participation. Every country is asked to nominate at least two candidates, one woman and one man. The GCSP will select participants ensuring diversity in ministerial representation, national origin, professional experience, educational/training background and gender. Given the competitive and demanding nature of the course, only the most qualified nominees will be accepted.

The deadline for applications is 29 January 2016 through the Swiss Embassy.

For further information, please consult our website www.gcsp.ch, the NISC Course Webpage or contact the GCSP through Ms Margarita Restrepo, NISC Participant Support, +41(0)22 730 96 72, e-mail: nisc.admin@gcsp.ch

We look forward to welcoming the selected participant(s) in Geneva in April 2016.

Yours sincerely,

Ambassador Christian Dussey
GCSP Director

17TH NEW ISSUES IN SECURITY COURSE

8
weeks

Course Director

Dr Christina Schori Liang
Dr Schori Liang is a Programme Advisor and Senior Fellow at the Emerging Security Challenges Programme at the GCSP. She regularly lectures at universities and defence academies, including at the NATO Defense College. She is former Adjunct Professor at Boston University.

GCSP

The Geneva Centre for Security Policy is an international foundation with 48 member states from across the globe that provides forward-thinking and innovative solutions for leaders and policymakers concerned with international affairs and security in today's complex, globalised world

Mapping the Contemporary Security Environment to Meet Future Challenges

The New Issues in Security Course (NISC) examines the evolution of security with a special focus on human security, transnational global threats and regional security challenges. The course deepens participants' understanding of contemporary security threats in order to prepare and empower them to have greater strategic impact in building a better security environment for the future.

Key benefits for you

The course will enable you to:

- Acquire knowledge about the contemporary and future global security challenges;
- Develop perspectives on the evolution of security issues and their inter-linkages across the threat spectrum;
- Enhance skills to map and respond cooperatively and effectively to contemporary security challenges, based on multilateral and multicultural teamwork; and
- Access an extensive network of expertise in international affairs and security as GCSP alumni.

"The course is a goldmine of security-related knowledge with the added value of networking and lasting friendships across cultures."

– Ms Sarah Danso, Kofi Annan International Peacekeeping Training Centre, Ghana

Why you should attend

This course offers a unique opportunity to interact with senior professionals from various countries, government ministries, armed forces and civilian organisations. Since 2000, the NISC responds to the need for a more people-centric focus in new and emerging security challenges arising from a rapidly globalising security environment.

Alumni community

Since 2000, the course has trained over 400 participants from more than 75 countries around the world.

Upon completion of the course, you will become part of the expanding GCSP alumni network of over 4500 professionals and enjoy continued access to our events. Security policy conferences enable current and past participants to meet, debate policy issues and share ideas and experiences in an informal setting.

Course design

The course is highly interactive and employs numerous teaching methodologies including top-down lectures, participant-led sessions and skills enhancement exercises.

The course is based on three reinforcing pillars:

1. Transfer of knowledge of current and emerging security challenges, as well as their potential impact on security policy. Knowledge is shared and co-created by the GCSP's global network of experts, GCSP faculty, and among the participants themselves.

2. Skill development exercises in areas such as, communication, crisis management, negotiation and mediation, intelligence analysis, gender awareness and media. A key element is the inclusion of multinational and multicultural perspectives to strengthen participants' ability to operate in a global environment.

3. Network building between course participants, the GCSP, international organisations, academics and alumni. This community enables participants to share perspectives and to maintain open channels in time of crisis. This pillar includes visits to international organisations based in Geneva such as: UNOG, UNHCR, IOM, ICRC, OMM, CERN and WTO and study trips.

Faculty profiles

The course teaching staff includes GCSP's international faculty composed of academics and practitioners with broad experience in international affairs, security policy, diplomacy and military affairs, as well as high-level international guest speakers from civil society, government, academic and international organisations.

Participant profile

Open to mid-career professionals working in national ministries, international organisations and non-governmental organisations. Candidates must have a relevant university degree and exposure to peace and security issues. Serving officers must have completed an advanced military staff course.

In the heart of "International Geneva"

Hosting over 35 international organisations, more than 250 non-governmental organisations, 252 diplomatic missions, representations and delegations, Geneva represents one of the world's richest networks in international affairs.
